

Become a WLA Library Ambassador!

The Washington Library Association (WLA) encourages members to serve as Library Ambassador between your library organization and WLA. To sign up as an Ambassador, send an email to becky@wla.org with your name, email address, and phone number.

Library Ambassadors are members of WLA who are interested in and willing to promote WLA and the benefits of membership within the organization they work for. Serving as a Library Ambassador is simple – all we ask is that each ambassador do something to promote WLA at least once a month in the organization they work for. Here are some examples of activities ambassadors could try:

Promote

- Identify a location in your organization (i.e. designated bulletin boards and staff rooms) to display WLA information and publications (i.e. program flyers, posters, membership brochures).
- Collaborate with Human Resources department to provide WLA information to new employees.
- Talk about WLA happenings at meetings you attend with other staff in your organization.
- Introduce staff in your organization to the WLA website.

Communicate

- Use your organization's electronic venues to introduce yourself as a Library Ambassador and invite staff to contact you.
- Share WLA related news and information through your organization's email list serves, Intranet or internal newsletter.
- Talk about your experiences as a WLA member, including what benefits you have received.
- Publicize the variety of ways staff can get involved in WLA.

Network

- Host local event(s) where staff in your organization can come to learn more about WLA and talk to other members.
- Invite WLA Board members or other WLA representatives to visit your organization (i.e. attend staff meetings or other events).
- Keep a roster of staff in your organization who are currently WLA members.
